How to Use This Book

Each observance has one page of background information for the teacher and seven pages of activities. The activity sheets, which vary from unit to unit, are designed for independent work. For younger students or those with special needs, you may want to help with directions or background information. However, once students have used a number of the activities, they will readily understand the purpose in subsequent units.

Background Information

This page gives you details about the observance. It provides the context for the choices made in the activity pages. You may want to share some of the information with the students before using some of the activity sheets. This page also includes a list of recommended books and information about places in the world where the observance occurs.

Riddles

This activity uses a riddle format to provide information about key words and concepts. The Word Bank allows students to make thoughtful choices whether they have relevant background knowledge or do not.

Mixed-Up Words

This word-scramble activity allows students to combine decoding skills with picture reading while practicing their spelling skills.

All of the activity pages and pictures of crafts are on the Digital Resource CD.

Connect the Words

This activity provides practice with multisyllabic, compound, or two-word phrases, reinforcing word analysis skills.

Word Search

This activity provides students with practice finding key vocabulary words. In some instances, students build a sentence from the relevant words.

Maze

This activity allows students to think ahead so that they make it through the correct path.

Look Again!

This activity allows students to examine an image for differences.

Writing

Some activities include writing, such as writing acrostic poems, writing messages, alphabetizing, and wordplay.

Craft Activity

Each unit includes at least one craft activity. These use routinely available materials. Many of the art processes can be applied to other projects.

Reader’s Theater

Many of the observances end with a choral reading. You may determine that using this at the beginning of a unit helps provide the background information for completion of the activity sheets. In other instances, the choral reading can be used for a holiday program for families or other classes. The script can also serve as a culminating activity for a more in-depth exploration of a theme, such as a study of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington. Feel free to copy the script and adjust the character assignments for small-group readings.

Background Information

January 1 is a relatively “new” New Year’s Day. Ancient societies celebrated the New Year when the harvests were considered ready to eat. Consequently, finding a specific date was a problem, and calendars were regularly being reformed. Before 153 B.C., the Romans used March 24 as their New Year’s Day, the day when consuls assumed their new positions.

Today, New Year’s Eve is a time to celebrate. Parties are held throughout the world. The biggest party in the United States—launched in 1907—is held in New York City. Fireworks are replaced with an illuminated ball lowered at midnight. No one knows for sure how many people crowd into Times Square to watch the Waterford crystal ball drop, but police have estimated in the past that it is between 500,000 and a million people gather each year.

Around the World

New Year’s Day varies widely around the world. Most parties around the world include noisemakers, fireworks, and party hats to celebrate New Year’s Eve. Instead of a visit from Santa Claus on Christmas, children in Russia welcome Grandfather Frost. Dressed in blue, he arrives on New Year’s Eve with a bag of toys. In Australia, people enjoy picnics, rodeos, and time at the beach. Similarly, people in South Africa enjoy the warm weather outdoors. London has a New Year’s Day Parade. Children in the United Kingdom visit neighbors, singing for treats before noon. Similarly, in Northern Portugal, children go caroling for treats. Children in Egypt dress up in colorful clothes and receive sweets. In Holland, people eat doughnuts because the round shape stands for a full circle of life from one year to the next. People in Japan send postcards to friends and family so that they arrive on January 1, and children receive gifts of money. People in Korea visit their families and play traditional games. Even though New Year’s Day is celebrated in different ways, people from all over the world get excited for the new year ahead.
