"Class sets of these titles to support curriculum units would be especially helpful for small group or whole class instruction."

—School Library Journal

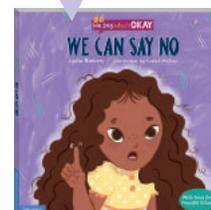

"Bodily autonomy is such an important topic to bring up to kids as early as they can understand it, and Bowers creates a tactful, accessible forum with this story. This book should be in every classroom."

—School Library Journal, Starred Review

Praise for Teaching and Supporting English Learners: A Guide to Welcoming and Engaging Newcomers (9781087648866)

"Eugenia Mora-Flores and Stephanie Dewing have written a thoughtful and compassionate guide for welcoming, servicing, and engaging newcomer students. Newcomer students come with diverse customs, religions, experiences, and languages. This resource includes a range of student voices, a necessary tool in understanding how to better support newcomer students and broaden the cultural lens of our classrooms."—Georgina Owen, Office of Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Education, Colorado Department of Education

"As an administrator in a district with a significant number of newcomer students, this text is immediately relevant. It's practical and organized intuitively for easy access and reference. The strategies are explained clearly and are supported with specific examples. The vignettes from actual newcomers help to humanize the students we tend to know the least about."—Roderick Maurice Castro, Assistant Superintendent, Educational Services at Santa Rosa City School District / (Full) Professor, USC Rossier School of Education Adjunct Faculty/ CALSA Region 1 Director
