How to Use This Literature Guide

Today's standards demand rigor and relevance in the reading of complex texts. The units in this series guide teachers in a rich and deep exploration of worthwhile works of literature for classroom study. The most rigorous instruction can also be interesting and engaging!

Many current strategies for effective literacy instruction have been incorporated into these instructional guides for literature. Throughout the units, text-dependent questions are used to determine comprehension of the book as well as student interpretation of the vocabulary words. The books chosen for the series are complex exemplars of carefully crafted works of literature. Close reading is used throughout the units to guide students toward revisiting the text and using textual evidence to respond to prompts orally and in writing. Students must analyze the story elements in multiple assignments for each section of the book. All these strategies work together to rigorously guide students through their study of literature.

The next few pages will make clear how to use this guide for a purposeful and meaningful literature study. Each section of this guide is set up in the same way to make it easier for you to implement the instruction in your classroom.

Theme Thoughts

The great works of literature used throughout this series have important themes that have been relevant to people for many years. Many of the themes will be discussed during the various sections of this instructional guide. However, it would also benefit students to have independent time to think about the key themes of the novel.

Before students begin reading, have them complete Pre-Reading Theme Thoughts (page 13). This graphic organizer will allow students to think about the themes outside the context of the story. They'll have the opportunity to evaluate statements based on important themes and defend their opinions. Be sure to have students keep their papers for comparison to the Post-Reading Theme Thoughts (page 64). This graphic organizer is similar to the pre-reading activity. However, this time, students will be answering the questions from the point of view of one of the characters in the novel. They have to think about how the character would feel about each statement and defend their thoughts. To conclude the activity, have students compare what they thought about the themes before they read the novel to what the characters discovered during the story.

Vocabulary

Each teacher overview page has definitions and sentences about how key vocabulary words are used in the section. These words should be introduced and discussed with students. There are two student vocabulary activity pages in each section. On the first page, students are asked to define the ten words chosen by the author of this unit. On the second page in most sections, each student will select at least eight words that he or she finds interesting or difficult. For each section, choose one of these pages for your students to complete. With either assignment, you may want to have students get into pairs to discuss the meanings of the words. Allow students to use reference guides to define the words. Monitor students to make sure the definitions they have found are accurate and relate to how the words are used in the text.

On some of the vocabulary student pages, students are asked to answer text-related questions about the vocabulary words. The following question stems will help you create your own vocabulary questions if you'd like to extend the discussion.

- How does this word describe _____'s character?
- In what ways does this word relate to the problem in this story?
- How does this word help you understand the setting?
- In what ways is this word related to the story's solution?
- Describe how this word supports the novel's theme of
- What visual images does this word bring to your mind?
- For what reasons might the author have chosen to use this particular word?

At times, more work with the words will help students understand their meanings. The following quick vocabulary activities are a good way to further study the words.

- Have students practice their vocabulary and writing skills by creating sentences and/or paragraphs in which multiple vocabulary words are used correctly and with evidence of understanding.
- Students can play vocabulary concentration. Students make a set of cards with the words and a separate set of cards with the definitions. Then, students lay the cards out on the table and play concentration. The goal of the game is to match vocabulary words with their definitions.
- Students can create word journal entries about the words. Students choose words they think are important and then describe why they think each word is important within the novel.

Analyzing the Literature

After students have read each section, hold small-group or whole-class discussions. Questions are written at two levels of complexity to allow you to decide which questions best meet the needs of your students. The Level 1 questions are typically less abstract than the Level 2 questions. Level 1 is indicated by a square, while Level 2 is indicated by a triangle. These questions focus on the various story elements, such as character, setting, and plot. Student pages are provided if you want to assign these questions for individual student work before your group discussion. Be sure to add further questions as your students discuss what they've read. For each question, a few key points are provided for your reference as you discuss the novel with students.

Reader Response

In today's classrooms, there are often great readers who are below-average writers. So much time and energy is spent in classrooms getting students to read on grade level that little time is left to focus on writing skills. To help teachers include more writing in their daily literacy instruction, each section of this guide has a literature-based reader response prompt. Each of the three genres of writing is used in the reader responses within this guide: narrative, informative/explanatory, and argument. Students have a choice between two prompts for each reader response. One response requires students to make connections between the reading and their own lives. The other prompt requires students to determine text-to-text connections or connections within the text.

Close Reading the Literature

Within each section, students are asked to closely reread a short section of text. Since some versions of the novels have different page numbers, the selections are described by chapter and location, along with quotations to guide the readers. After each close reading, there are text-dependent questions to be answered by students.

Encourage students to read each question one at a time and then go back to the text and discover the answer. Work with students to ensure that they use the text to determine their answers rather than making unsupported inferences. Once students have answered the questions, discuss what they discovered. Suggested answers are provided in the answer key.

The generic, open-ended stems below can be used to write your own text-dependent questions if you would like to give students more practice.

- Give evidence from the text to support
- Justify your thinking using textual evidence about
- Find evidence to support your conclusions about
- What textual evidence helps the reader understand . . . ?
- Use the book to tell why _____ happens.
- Based on events in the story,
- Use textual evidence to describe why

Making Connections

The activities in this section help students make cross-curricular connections to writing, mathematics, science, social studies, or the fine arts. Each of these types of activities requires higher-order thinking skills from students.

Creating with the Story Elements

It is important to spend time discussing the common story elements in literature. Understanding the characters, setting, and plot can increase students' comprehension and appreciation of the story. If teachers discuss these elements daily, students will more likely internalize the concepts and look for the elements in their independent reading. Another important reason for focusing on the story elements is that students will be better writers if they think about how the stories they read are constructed.

Students are given three options for working with the story elements. They are asked to create something related to the characters, setting, or plot of the novel. Students are given a choice in this activity so that they can decide to complete the activity that most appeals to them. Different multiple intelligences are used so that the activities are diverse and interesting to all students.

Analyzing the Literature

Provided below are discussion questions you can use in small groups, with the whole class, or for written assignments. Each question is given at two levels so you can choose the right question for each group of students. Activity sheets with these questions are provided (pages 18–19) if you want students to write their responses. For each question, a few key discussion points are provided for your reference.

Story Element	■ Level 1	▲ Level 2	Key Discussion Points
Setting	How do the boys come to be on the island? Based on what you've read so far, will it be easy or hard to survive and why?	Why do you think the author had the boys' plane land on an island? What challenges do the boys face in a world without adults?	The boys' plane is shot down. It isn't hard to survive on an island because food, fresh water, and shelter are usually plentiful. People can usually put aside their differences to survive, but without that to unite them, cracks will form. Isolation and leadership struggles are some of the challenges the boys face.
Characters	How does Piggy differ from the other boys, either physically or in his opinions and views?	Discuss the qualities in Piggy that set him apart from the other boys. How is he more like a grownup or more connected to civilization than the others?	Piggy is overweight, wears glasses, and has asthma. He seems the least comfortable in the natural setting, the most conscious of its dangers, and most focused on returning to civilization. He wants to organize the group with the conch and by collecting a roster of names.
Plot	How do the boys use the conch shell? How does Ralph's possession of the conch affect his position in the group?	Explain the role of the conch shell, what it represents, and why it is important to the group of boys.	The conch shell is viewed by Piggy as a valuable object. Later, it becomes a symbol of democratic social order. The boys call meetings by blowing on the conch. They pass it to take turns talking. Ralph's ownership of the conch secures his position as elected group leader.
Characters	Does Ralph seem like a good or bad person? How do you feel about his treatment of Piggy?	List Ralph's character strengths and weaknesses. How do you feel about his treatment of Piggy?	Ralph's repeated "sucks to your auntie/ass-mar" comments to Piggy are unkind, and he betrays Piggy by divulging his detested nickname. However, he shows leadership potential as he reassures and organizes the group.

Close Reading the Literature

Directions: Closely reread the section in chapter 1 where Jack Merridew is introduced. Start with the sentence, “Within the diamond haze of the beach something dark was fumbling along.” Continue until you read, “Jack stood up.” Read each question, and then revisit the text to find evidence that supports your answer.

1. Select a sentence from the text that tells you something about the relationship between Jack and the other choir members. What inferences can you make from it?

2. What words and phrases are used to describe Jack’s physical appearance? What can you infer about his personality based on the description of his appearance?

3. Why doesn’t Piggy try to ask the names of the choir members and remember them? How does he feel about Jack? Explain how the text helped you draw these conclusions.

4. Do you think Piggy and Jack are more likely to become friends or enemies? What about Ralph and Jack? Include textual evidence from this passage to support your answers.

Creating with the Story Elements

Directions: Thinking about the story elements of character, setting, and plot in a novel is very important to understanding what is happening and why. Complete one of the following activities based on what you’ve read so far. Be creative and have fun!

Characters

Create a set of five illustrated character profile cards, one for each of the following characters Ralph, Piggy, Jack Merridew, Sam and Eric (can have one card for both twins), and Simon. Include the following headings on each of the cards: Physical Appearance, Approximate Age, Character’s Strengths, Character’s Weaknesses, Character Least Likely To..., and Character Most Likely To... Use the text of Lord of the Flies and your imagination to fill in the profile information on each card. Include an illustration of each character on the reverse side of the card.

Setting

Draw a map of the island. Base your illustration on the descriptive details provided in the first two chapters of Lord of the Flies. Label the various parts of the island. Use color coding to represent different surfaces (sand, water, rock, vegetation).

Plot

Using the hints offered in the text and your imagination, create a newspaper front page that includes stories about the events that have resulted in the boys becoming stranded on the island.
